It's Time to Sign Up for eStatements & Mobile Deposits

Over the past several months we have noticed a significant increase in postal delivery times in our area. As a result, items mailed from the Credit Union, like this statement and newsletter, are taking longer than usual. If you haven't signed up for eStatements, this is the best time to start this service to avoid delays. eStatements are available in eBranch within the first few days of each month and can be printed or downloaded to your personal archiving device.

Items mailed to the Credit Union are also taking extra time as well. If you are making a loan payment by mailing us a paper check from another financial institution, we strongly encourage you to use Mobile Deposit instead. Within our Mobile App, simply sign up for Mobile Deposit and then write yourself a check for the loan payment. You can then perform a Mobile Deposit straight to the loan account. In most instances, the payment will be applied to your loan within 1-2 business days. Streamline both of these processes and discover the benefit of paperless recordkeeping with electronic documents.

Protecting Older Americans

Financial exploitation is the most common type of abuse of older Americans, and the strategies that are employed are ever growing. Understanding the general strategies can prevent you or a loved one from falling victim.

Solicitation of Money Transfers

Through emails and phone calls, there are multiple ways abusers will use requests for money transfers to try to get your financial information. Many tactics appeal to your emotions, such as pretending to be a grandchild that is in need of money or individuals or organizations desperately needing help. Whenever you are unexpectedly asked to transfer money, you should ignore the request. If you feel it might be a valid request from someone close to you, call that person to confirm the request before taking any action.

Requests for Personally Identifiable Information (PII)

Red flags should go up in your head when someone asks you for PII, which is any data that could be used to identify you and access your financial information. You should never give out PII to someone you do not know and for purposes you do not understand. Examples of PII are your social security number, passport number, and bank account numbers. This information on its own, or combined with other information about you, such as an email address or full name, could lead to financial exploitation.

Caregivers

As you get older, it is important to establish trust and expectations with your caregivers regarding your care and financial situation. However, this is not always possible, especially if you are cared for by someone you are not close with. Be sure to safeguard your financial information such as bank accounts, credit cards and passwords so that caregivers cannot readily access it without your permission.

Becoming aware of the types of strategies used for financial exploitation will help you be less likely to become a victim.
